

METHOD FOR IMAGING A CONTINUOUSLY MOVING OBJECT

Abstract

A continuously moving object is imaged by a video projector producing a rapid sequence of stationary images. A galvanometer actuated mirror tracks the motion of the moving object and synchronizes it to the sequence of stationary images in order to avoid motion caused blurring of the images. The moving object is flat or is wrapped around a cylinder.